A second enzyme, phosphoglucomutase, converts the glucose-1-phosphate to glucose-6-phosphate. Glycogen involves two types of glycosidic linkage: the linear α [1→4] linkage and the branching α [1→6] linkages. During glycogenolysis glucose units are phosphorolysed from branches of glycogen until four residues before a glucose that is branched with an α [1→6] linkage.

XII U3 Carbohydrates.indd 79 4/8/2020 3:06:53 PM